It's with great pleasure, that Dan Miller present a series of new works produced during his stay at CPH AIR.

Dan Millers practice is bound by an acute awareness of materials and their properties. Manipulated through strict method and process based investigation, works are continually cross-referenced and appropriated, blurring the line between original and facsimile.

Dan Miller present a new series of paintings produced during the CPH AIR programme. reworks the territory of ratio and repetition, where painting's sign-like vocabulary is disabled; superseded by a cipher. Symmetrical compositions of dots, lines and polygons float on an x/y axis, the grid providing a skeletal underpinning for pictorial and chromatic arrangement. Painterly depth, created by barely visible layers of 'interference' acrylic, characterise Miller's two-tone works. Through these acts of delineation Miller's work renders apparent a function of reading that exists between the production and reception of an artwork, a process defined by encryption and deciphering.

Dan Miller (b. 1980) lives and works in Glasgow, graduating from the Glasgow School of Art in 2002. Recent solo shows include Still Life in association with SWG3, The Glasgow International Festival of Visual Art.
